BEFORT OF THE SUBORE COMBUTER.

(m. 6. m) -

District No. 1—Summer School. Miss Laura J. Cturrier, teacher. This school in some respects has been called rather a land school to govern, but Miss Currier succeeded admirably, sic maintained good order, the classes were well arranged and the instruction thorough and practical.

Winter School: Miss Louisa A, Eaton, teacher. Miss Laton less had a high reputation as a teacher and she fully sustained it in this school. At my first visit, some of the larger classes, were deficient in the rudiments of some of the mest in-portant branches, but at the closing examination, I noticed they had made great improvement and were very thorough.

The Printential Committee, should receive a due share of credit for so judiciously obtaining the services of two such successful teachers.

District No. 2—4. Kilbura, Prudential Committee, Summer School—C. Pelle Randictt, teacher. This teacher was a resident of the district, and though it was her first attempt at terching, she succeeded very satisfactorily. She labored hard for the improvement of her scholars, and we hope her efforts were appreciated. The long needed improvement in this district, has at last been made. During the past year a fine, large and commodique school-house has been erected, which is as much an ornament to the district, as the old 6 Brick' was a disgrace.

Winter School. Miss Fusic J. Edgerly, teacher. This to c or had the ght five schools before taking charge of this and as far as we were able to ascertain had always given good setisfaction. At the examination, she gave unmistakable evidences of good qualifications. At our first visit, we saw nothing why the teacher should not have gone through the school well. The classes were well arranged, the order good and most of the scholars studious and interested. Towards the close of the fifth week of the term, some difficulties arose not easily overcome, in consequence, a large unjority of the scholars were withdrawn from the school but it is thought, could there have been an understanding between parents and teacher, and the blame rested where the blame belonged, all would have been convinced that the teacher was not so much at fault, as was at first supposed. If the parents in this district, and every other district, would visit the schools, there would be less fault found with the teachers. Those scholars who did remain in the school till the end of the term, made good improvement.

District No. 3—Samuel Currier, Prud. Com. Summer School. Miss Annie R. Shaw, teacher. This teacher has had considerable experience and is a faithful and successful one. The general appearance of the school was good.

The progress very fair.

Winter School. Clarence L. Clough, teacher. This was the teacher's first school. He gave evidences of being a good scholar, and at my first visit, good results were predicted, but at the closing examination, there was a lack or thoroughness which is essential in making a school a successful one, it was evident that some of the scholars, had passed over some very important rules, that they did not understand.

District No. 4—J. H. Fifield Prud. Com. Summer School. Miss Eliza W. Tebbitts, teacher. Miss Tebbetts was a very fine scholar and a faithful and efficient teacher, she had a pleasant disposition, and had an easy manner of imparting instruction to those under her charge. Good progress was made in the various studies pursued and particularly in grammar and arithmetic.

Winter School, Miss Georgia B. Perley, teacher. Miss Perley is a finely educated and accomplished teached, and came here highly recommended. Good order was maintained without apparent effort. The school was well classed. The attendance was remarkable (as shown by the register) 13 scholars were not absent one half day and of the whole number of scholars 29, the average attendance 27, bears good testimony for the scholars and teacher. The committee was not able to visit the school acits close, but learns from those that were present, that it was a very profitable term and one with which the parents were well satisfied.

District No. 5—I Thompson Prud. Com. Summer School, Miss Fannie D. Pearsons, teacher. This teachers long acquaintance with this school and consequent understanding of the disposition and abilty of each scholar, made her services valuable in this district. Considering the large number of scholars in this school, the order was better than could reasonably be expected. The teacher was unwearied in her exertions to make her scholars fully comprehend what they passed over. The examination was very interesting it being interspersed with singing, a dialogue and other recitations.

Fall Term, Same teacher. This school was visited by the committee at the commencement, and was properly cotified by the teacher of its close, but failed to get notice in season to make a second visit, but from what is already known of the reputation of this teacher, the school was without doubt, an entire success. It was a great advantage to this district, in having two terms in so close proximity.

Winter School Otis L. Sanbern, teacher. This is the largest and most advanced school in town, and as a matter of course, requires an experienced and competent teacher to manage it, and in our estimation, there is no one better qualified for the position, than Mr. Sanborn. His accumulating knowledge of the profession, has enhanced his usefulness. In his mode of government, be exercises superior judgment. His manner of explanation, is clear and comprehensible. Everything pertaining to the school was satisfactory to the committee. The parents and citizens, by contributing the board and wood, have added a third term of eight weeks to their school, which is a good example for other districts to follow.

District No. 6—E. G. Folsom, Prud. Com. Summer and Winter Schools. Mrs. Mary, C. Folsom, teacher. This teacher has had years of experience as a teacher, and joubtless, understands her vocation. She labored incessantly for the advancement of her scholars and seemed desirous of improving their moral character, as much as their limited amount of knowledge, and the kind teclings manifested by the scholars towards their teacher the last day of the term, convinced those present, that she was loved and respected by every scholar in school. Progress very good. Register perfect. The compositions, read by John A. Small. Ella C. Folsom and Dora E. Lee, were very interesting.

District No. 7—Isaac Bennett, Prud. Com. Summer School. Miss Nettie J. Flummer, teacher. This teacher was young and inexperienced, this being her first school. At my first visit, the school appeared fairly, but at the close, there was a lack of interest on the part of the scholars, and the progress was not what it ought to have been, considering the small number of scholars and the length of the term.

Wister School. Miss M. Josie Glidden, teacher. This appeared to be a very quiet and orderly school. Teacher seemed to be engaged in her work. Although there were some local disturbances, which for a time retarded the progress, yet at the examination, the improvement made by those who had made afforts to improve, was satisfactory. The teacher remarked that "the scholars have been very kind to me, and of edient to the rules, and it has been a very pleasant school.

District No. 8—Daniel Glidden, Prud., Com. Summer School, Miss Mary R. Pease Teacher. This was the second term the teacher has taught in this district. The instruction was thorough. The classes in mental arithmetic, grammar and history, were commendable to both teacher and scholars. She allowed no rehelat to pass over any part they did not understand. Whispering was strictly forbiden and everything in the school room was in order. Suffice to say that this school was second to none in town.

Winter School, Miss Paonie D. Pearson, teacher. Miss Pearsons commenced this school in her usual manner, manifesting the same interest for her pupils. Though we were not present at the close we feel assured from our acquaintance with the school and teacher that a pleasant and profitable school was the result.

District No. 9—John M. Roberts, Prud., Com. Summer School, Miss Amanda S. Weeks, teacher. I was favorably expressed with the appearance of the school. The teacher aboved with mach patience and perseverance, the school responsed well disposed and interested in their studies. The chool closing at a very busy season, quite a large number of the large scholars were absent so that the progress could not be so well determined, but those that were present did credit to themselves and honor to their teacher.

Winter School, Miss Emma II, Page, teacher. She was using and but little was known of her former seccess as a tracher, she never before having faught in this town. Her miring efforts for the improvement of her pupils were cowned with success. She was beloved by her scholars and was thorough and practical in her manner of instruction. The improvement considering the length of the term was not excelled by any in town. She had the support of the parents, and from what we can learn, could her services rain be obtained it would promote the interest of the district.

District No. 10—Samuel N. Jewett, Prud., Com. Summer School, Miss Marrilla A. Farrar, teacher. This was a cardl school composed of small scholars, yet they manifested a good degree of interest in their studies and the improvement was all that could be expected for a term of only six weeks.

Winter School, same teacher. It gives ample evidence that Miss Farrar's labor as an energetic and efficient teacher are appreciated by being employed the third term in this district. Quite a number of large scholars attended this term making the school more interesting. They seemed to have a thorough understanding of the radiments of the various studies they had pursued. The large number of visits from the parents speak well for the interest they have taken in the school.

District No. 11—Charles E. Heath, Prod. Com. Summer School Miss Francis M, Heath, teacher. This was the smallest school in town, but we doubt if another has made greater advancement. The teacher gave her undivided attention to the wants of her scholars, who manifested a good degree of interest. At the examination not one question was missed or answered incorrectly.

Winter school, Miss Fannie F. Lincoln, teacher. This teacher graduated at the Concord High School and came here well recommended by her teacher. There was some outside talk in regard to the order and managment of this school yet upon the whole it is thought she did as well as beginners generally. The scholars made fair progress and seemed orderly and obedient.

District No. 12—A. D. Leighton, Prud. Com. Winter School (one term) Allan J. Hackett, teacher. In this district they have a liberal portion of school money, but barely escaped having no school at all from a great "scarcity of children" by importing a few scholars into the district, a school commenced under the instruction of Mr. Hackett, who is a good scholar and though it was his first school, he proved an exemplary teacher, and the proficiency made by the scholars in their several studies, would have done credit to a veteran teacher. The teacher thus remarked in the register: "The school has not been difficult to manage as most of the scholars have been well disposed and obedient, and I would mention Fannie M. Wells and Gertie E. Swain whom I would recommend as model scholars."

In conclusion permit me to suggest that great care should be exercised in the selection of teachers, something more than a mere knowledge of books is required, practical education, rather than theoretical, is desirable, that children may be fitted for the realities of the life upon which they are entering. Again, a teacher may be well qualified for one school and yet totally unfitted for another. a fact too often overlooked by Prudential Committees, as weil as by teachers themselves. Parents make a great mistake in not becoming personally acquainted with teachers and schools, and not unf equently find fault with both when they have no actual knowledge of either. Insubordination in school is in many instances produced or increased by parents giving too much heed to complaints children, without knowing the other side of the story. nine cases in ten it will be found that the teacher is in the right and the pupil in the wrong. The usefulness of schools may be greatly increased and leachers aided by refraining from a hasty interference between teacher and scholars. Teachers of course are sometimes in the wrong, and there are but lew scholars but that at times need some correc-

Our common school system should be made as near perfect as our means will permit, for through it a very large proportion of the children in the state receive all the schooling they ever obtain.
